Indian Institute of Technology Indore officiating director Neelesh Kumar Jain stated that they were taking all possible steps to ensure that their students are not at the receiving end of Covid-19 pandemic.

At the online orientation programme of new PG & PhD students, Jain said: "The institute is forced to have an online orientation owing to the pandemic situation but we will leave no stone unturned to ensure that the students do not suffer any academic loss and the academic and research activities are being conducted in a time-bound manner.

"Knowledge is more important than information, hence it is vital that the students focus more on gaining knowledge. I urge the students to focus on their performance as your potential has already been judged and that is how you have secured your seat here. IIT Indore has research-oriented teaching curriculum, hence the students should go beyond their limits to reach the zenith," he added.

The students were also oriented on the academic, research & development, student affairs, training & placement, international, safety & security, hostels, medical and library facilities by the respective heads of the section.

Around 208 and 53 students have registered at IIT Indore in PG and PhD courses respectively.

The courses for which the students have registered at IIT Indore are PhD in 11 disciplines, MTech + PhD dual degree in two disciplines, MSc + PhD dual degree in 5 disciplines, MTech in 6 disciplines, MS in 5 disciplines and MS (Research) in 3 disciplines.
