IIT-Indore professor Avinash Sonawane from the Department of Bio-sciences and Biomedical Engineering has received the National Bio Entrepreneurship Award, 2021, in the Drug Development and Health Care category. Sonawane received this award for his innovation in the development of the novel asparaginase drug to improve the treatment of childhood primary and relapse blood cancer.

This prize was sponsored by Biocon Biologics-India's largest biopharmaceutical company. More than 2,500 registrants and 300 innovators across India participated in this competition. The winners were selected after 4 rigorous selection rounds.

The Biotechnology Industrial Research Assistance Council (BIRAC), Department of Biotechnology, Government of India, in partnership with Centre for Cellular and Molecular Platforms (C-CAMP), Bengaluru, set up the BIRAC Regional Entrepreneurship Centre (BREC) with the objective of stimulating, fostering and enhancing innovations of the Indian biotech industry to encourage the spirit of bio-entrepreneurship, particularly start-ups, for creation of affordable products addressing the needs of the largest section of society.

Every year, C-CAMP, in association with BIRAC, organises the National Bio Entrepreneurship Competition (NBEC), a nationwide competition to attract, identify and nurture bio-entrepreneurs working on novel and scalable business ideas with significant societal impact.

Over the past five years, the NBEC has emerged as a flagship platform for bio-entrepreneurs and innovators in India to showcase their deep science-driven ideas and has created a great impact.
